

Piseth Ngek & Soth Saran

Piseth and Soth both attend computer training classes provided by SCIAF's Overseas partner organisation called Caritas Cambodia. The vocational training and personal development courses they receive help them into the world of work and improve the quality of life for themselves, their families and Cambodian society.

Piseth Ngek (21), student at computer science class

“I had just finished high school when this opportunity came up. I had heard about the Caritas course from my older sister. She recommended me to come. The course is free. I hope to have some interesting experiences with the personal development side of the course, later on. I hope I will get some knowledge that will help my community. I come from a small village in Kampong Thom. I am really enjoying this course.”

Soth Saran (22), student on Community Development Course.

“I find the Community Development course very interesting. I chose this course because Cambodia is a very poor country, and if I learn skills from this course I will be able to return to the rural areas to help the people. At the end of the course, if I understand everything that I am taught, I will get a job in the development field. I come from Kampong Province, from a small village. I have five brothers and sisters. In Phnom Penh I stay with other girls in a rented house provided by Caritas. The boys stay at the Youth Centre.”
